

"Zelliges are the sequins of the tile world, imparting their glimmering, hand-cut goodness to surfaces in need of Moroccan magic" —Deborah Osburn

Handcrafted Zellige tiles date back to the 10th century. A millennium later, Clé, the e-boutique headed up by Deborah Osburn, brings to market a contemporary version of the traditional North African terra-cotta tiles. Clé's Zellige tiles are likewise made by hand—and hand-painted, with a variable mineral glaze—so have the characteristic undulating, imperfect surfaces and slight variations in shading. These Moroccan-made beauties, offered in 21 colors from weathered white to palace red, come as 2- and 4-inch squares, 2-by-6-inch rectangles, and 3-inch hexagons.

Best of all, they can be installed on walls or floors inside or out. According to Osburn, "Zellige, the original material of the tile world, has the unique power to transform any space it's in." Well said. cletile.com. circle 850 ➤
